Profile

Joshua Treem represents individual and corporate clients in a broad spectrum of legal matters. He appears frequently in state and federal courts across Maryland and neighboring jurisdictions in cases involving every facet of criminal investigations and prosecutions. He is particularly well known for his aggressive representation of individuals, including public officials, lobbyists, and high-level state administrators, as well as businesses, in state and federal criminal investigations and grand jury proceedings.

Joshua has extensive experience representing clients accused by the government of fraud involving the Small Business Administration, the Food and Drug Administration, and Medicare and Medicaid. He has also handled numerous cases involving controlled substances and related issues, including forfeitures.

Joshua has successfully represented college students in campus disciplinary proceedings over charges of sexual misconduct. Results have included dismissal of sanctions and clients being cleared of any wrongdoing.

Joshua also devotes substantial time to pro bono matters relating to important criminal and constitutional law issues, including successfully representing a woman charged with reckless endangerment for allegedly using illegal drugs while pregnant and a client charged with various crimes for sending "harassing" emails.

Joshua was selected the 2018 Lawyer of the Year for General Practice Criminal Defense and the 2016 Lawyer of the Year for Criminal Defense: Non-White-Collar in the Baltimore area by The Best Lawyers in America. Receiving this designation reflects the high level of respect a lawyer has earned among other leading lawyers in the same community and the same practice area for his abilities, professionalism, and integrity.

Joshua has been recognized by his peers for inclusion in Best Lawyers since 2008 and is listed in the General Practice Criminal Defense, White-Collar Criminal Defense, and Civil Rights Law areas.

Since 2007, Joshua has been chosen annually by his peers to the Maryland Super Lawyers. Only five percent of the lawyers in the state are chosen for inclusion in Maryland Super Lawyers.

Joshua has garnered extensive media notice for the following cases:

- Obtained an acquittal of charges and violations of Maryland's campaign fiduciary laws by a Baltimore County councilman;
